In her "Surprised Survival" series she documented her personal struggle with a life-threatening illness and transformed her challenges into powerful healing works of art.

Her latest project is titled "Vagina Dialogs". She explains, "I photograph and video women of all ages and ethnic backgrounds. The video interviews reflect a predetermined criterion of questions, which reveal their personal responses. My collaboration with each subject establishes a common ground between all of us and provides a safe space in which to share what is most intimate and often kept inside."

Susanne Buckler's art is in personal collections around the world. She has been featured in many publications such as Photo District News, The Wonderful World of Photography, Photo Design Magazine, Ad Directions and others. In American Photographer magazine writer David Kalish stated, "Susanne Buckler records beauty with her intuitive eyes and her moving imagination."

She has exhibited at The Soho Photo Gallery and The Professional Women Midtown Gallery, both in New York, NY.

Buckler earned a BFA from The Maryland Institute, College of Art and also attended Syracuse University. She taught at The School of Visual Arts, New York, NY.
